VIDEO TRIBUTE

A Memorial Video Tribute is a multimedia presentation created to honor and remember a departed loved one. It combines various elements such as photographs, videos, music, and sometimes additional content like quotes, poems, or personal messages. The purpose of a Video Tribute is to celebrate the life of the deceased and evoke fond memories and emotions among the attendees.

Cremation

When it comes to cremation services at James H. Cole, there are several options available to suit different preferences and needs.

Direct Cremation: Direct cremation is a simple and cost-effective option where the deceased is cremated soon after death without any formal funeral or viewing beforehand. This option doesn't require embalming and typically includes basic preparation of the body, transportation to the crematory, and the return of the cremated remains to the family.

Cremation with Viewing/Visitation: Some families choose to have a viewing or visitation before the cremation takes place and no formal ceremony. This option can provide family and friends a personal way to pay their respects and say their final goodbyes. The funeral home will arrange the details and requests of the family, and handle all requirements of the body preparation such as embalming, cosmetics, dressing, and casket selection.

Cremation with Memorial Service: A memorial service can be held before or after the cremation has taken place. It can be personalized to celebrate the life of the deceased and provide an opportunity for family and friends to gather, share memories, and find closure. The memorial service can be held at the funeral home, a place of worship, or any other meaningful location. At a Memorial Service, there is no casket present. A private viewing with the immediate family may be an option and should be discussed with your director at the time of the initial arrangements.

Traditional Funeral Service with Cremation: Commonly, families choose to have a traditional funeral service, followed by cremation instead of burial. This allows for all the elements of a traditional funeral, such as a visitation and funeral ceremony, while still choosing cremation as the final disposition method.

Scattering or Burial of Ashes: After the cremation, scattering of cremated remains can be done in a location of significance to the deceased or the family, while interment options include placing the ashes in a cemetery plot, columbarium, or mausoleum. The funeral home can help you navigate the regulations and options for these choices.

Personalization Options: James H. Cole provides various personalization options to honor the deceased. This can include customized urns, memorial jewelry, memorial stationery, photo tributes, or even unique ways to incorporate the ashes into keepsake items or artwork.

JEWELRY

We offer a full line of cremation and keepsake jewelry. These pieces allow you to place a small portion of your loved one's cremated remains or loc of hair inside of a secure chamber concealed within the pendant. These jewelry pieces are designed to be worn and kept close to your heart, providing an everlasting memory.

Our fingerprint jewelry pieces are offered in both non-chambered and chambered options; providing all of our families, whether they choose burial or cremation, an option that best fits their preference and taste.

There are many options for cremation families to choose from, so be sure to explore the wide variety of memorialization choices that we offer.

PARTING STONE

Parting Stones are a relatively new concept in memorialization. They are small, handcrafted stones that are infused with the cremated remains of a deceased. Parting Stones offer a tangible and portable way to remember and honor your loved one. These stones offer a clean, carefree way to scatter your loved ones ashes. Other options include being carried in a pocket, displayed on a shelf, or placed in a special location for a more personalized remembrance.

To create parting stones, a small amount of the cremated remains is mixed with a specially formulated stone composite material. Skilled artisans then shape and polish the stones to create a smooth and aesthetically pleasing finish.

Parting stones provide a physical connection to the deceased, allowing family members and friends to keep a part of their loved one close to them. They can be a source of comfort and serve as a memorial that can be passed down through generations.

URNS & KEEPSAKES

Families who choose cremation as the method of final disposition for their loved one often wish to create the perfect final memorial tribute.

This can be done by placing the cremated remains in an urn that truly represents their life. We offer many types of urns from which to choose. Decorative Urns can be placed in a special place in the home or office. There are also keepsake urns, which allow for smaller portions of the cremated remains to be shared among family members or close friends.

We also offer a full line of cremation jewelry in which to place a small portion of your loved one's cremated remains inside of, that can be worn and kept close to your heart. There are many options for cremation families to choose from, so be sure to explore the wide variety of memorialization choices that we offer.

Please visit the link below to view all of the urn options from which to choose. You can also view the distinct jewelry pieces and keepsakes we offer, which can also serve as a tribute to your loved one.

URN VAULTS

An urn vault, also known as a cremation vault or cremation urn vault, is a protective container designed to encase and safeguard an urn containing cremated remains.

Urn vaults offer protection against environmental factors such as moisture, insects, and the shifting of soil. They help maintain the integrity of the gravesite and provide an added layer of security for the urn, ensuring its long-term preservation.

Like burial vaults for caskets, urn vaults can be personalized to reflect the individual's or family's preferences. This may include customized engravings, decorative elements, or the selection of different materials, colors, or finishes.

Urn vaults are an additional expense to consider in the funeral arrangement process. The cost of urn vaults can vary depending on factors such as the materials used, design complexity, and personalization options chosen.

Vaults

Vaults, also known as burial vaults or grave liners, are containers designed to enclose a casket or urn within a burial plot. They serve as an additional layer of protection for the casket or urn, providing structural support and helping to prevent the ground from sinking or collapsing over time. Vaults are commonly used in traditional burial services and can be offered as an option by funeral homes. They provide an added layer of support and help prevent the ground from settling, which can occur due to natural factors or machinery used in cemetery maintenance.

There are two main types of vaults: burial vaults and grave liners. Burial vaults are typically sealed containers that fully enclose the casket or urn, providing maximum protection. Grave liners, on the other hand, offer minimal protection and are often made of concrete or other materials, covering only the top and sides of the casket or urn. When making funeral arrangements, it's advisable to discuss the options for vaults with the funeral home and consider any cemetery requirements or personal preferences. They can provide guidance on the available choices, regulations, costs, and assist you in making an informed decision that best suits your needs.

Digital Register Book

QR codes provide a time-saving and efficient way to electronically sign the register book. To use this feature, visitors can simply scan the code with their smartphones and sign in without the need for a physical register book or pen. This also is a great aid to the family because it gives them the opportunity to electronically generate the acknowledgement cards; reducing the stress and fatigue of having to decipher the handwriting of others and addressing a multitude of envelopes.

Livestream

Live streaming funeral services has become increasingly significant and beneficial, transforming the way we commemorate and honor the lives of our loved ones. This innovative technology allows individuals who are unable to physically attend the funeral to participate remotely, ensuring that everyone has the opportunity to pay their respects and find solace in the grieving process.

Live streaming a funeral service can provide an invaluable way to honor, remember, and support those who are grieving. It embraces technology to bridge physical distances, ensuring that no one is left out and that the memories of our loved ones can be cherished and shared, regardless of the limitations and challenges we may face.

Online Memorial Page

The James H. Cole online memorial page is a digital platform designed to honor and remember a loved one who has passed away. It serves as a virtual tribute where family, friends, and acquaintances can gather, share memories, and pay their respects.

Our online memorial pages offer many benefits including:

Biography and Obituary: The page provides a space to share the individual's life story, important milestones, achievements, and significant events. An obituary can be included to provide essential information about the surviving family members and those who have already passed. The funeral program can also be added to the page, giving everyone an opportunity to view and print the program, whether they were able to attend the service or not.

Photo and Video Gallery: Users can upload and view a collection of photographs and videos capturing special moments, memories, and experiences shared with the deceased.

Guestbook & Condolences: Visitors can leave messages of condolences and sympathy to express their support and offer comfort to the bereaved family. The digital guestbook also allows visitors to sign in and leave their names, comments, and memories. This provides a permanent record of those who paid their respects and serves as a source of comfort for the family, knowing how their loved one impacted the lives of others.

Memorial Donations: Our memorial pages provide an easy way for making donations to a designated charity or organization in memory of the deceased. This feature allows friends and those wanting to support the family a way to contribute to a cause that was important to their loved one.

The Arrangement Process

When arranging a funeral with a funeral director, there is some key information you will need to provide. Here is a brief summary of the information typically required during the funeral arrangement process:

Basic Information: You will need to provide the deceased person's full name, date of birth, date of death, city and state of birth, social security number, highest level of education completed, mothers maiden name and fathers name. This information is essential for legal documentation and record-keeping.

Contact Information: The funeral director will ask for your contact details, including your name, phone number, and address. They will need this information to communicate with you and provide any necessary updates.

Military Discharge: If your loved one served in the armed forces, please provide us with a copy of the honorable discharge (DD-214) or a certificate or letter of discharge.

Funeral Preferences: You should have an idea of the type of funeral service you want, whether it's a burial or cremation, a traditional funeral or nontraditional service. If there are any specific religious or cultural customs you would like to incorporate, let the funeral director know. Your funeral director will answer any questions and walk you through this process.

Location: You will need to decide where the funeral service will take place. This could be a funeral home chapel, a place of worship, a graveside service, or another location of your choice.

Viewing or Visitation: If you wish to have a viewing or visitation, the funeral director will assist you in scheduling the times and coordinate the necessary details such as clothing and additional personalized services.

Casket or Urn Selection: If you have decided on a burial or cremation, you will need to choose a casket or an urn. The funeral director will provide options for you to consider and explain the associated costs and package options.

Personalization: Discuss any personalization elements you would like to incorporate into the funeral service, such as specific music, readings, or visual displays. The funeral director can guide you on how to personalize the service to reflect the life and individuality of the deceased.

Obituary: You may be asked to provide information for the obituary, including the deceased person's biographical details, achievements, and surviving family members. The funeral director can assist you in composing the obituary or provide guidance on how to submit it to local newspapers or online platforms.

Legal Documentation: The funeral director will guide you through the necessary paperwork, such as obtaining the death certificate and completing any required permits or authorizations for the funeral service and burial or cremation.

Financial Considerations: It's important to discuss the financial aspects of the funeral arrangements with the funeral director. They will provide a breakdown of the costs involved and assist you in accessing any available financial assistance or insurance coverage. At this time, any applicable insurance policy information should be presented to the arrangement counselor.

Remember that funeral directors are experienced professionals who are there to support you during this difficult time. They will guide you through the process, answer any questions you may have, and ensure that your wishes and the wishes of the deceased are respected and honored.

Death Away from Home Repatriation

Handling a death away from home requires coordination and cooperation between different parties, but the professionals at James H. Cole will help you navigate through the process, and ensure that your loved one's remains are handled with dignity and respect.

Immediate Response: If you are present at the time of death, call emergency services or the local authorities in the area where the death has occurred. They will respond to the scene, provide direction as to the next steps that need to be taken.

Selecting a Funeral Home: Before contacting a funeral home you will need to decide if any type of viewing or service will be held in the city where the passing has occurred. If yes, then you will need to contact a local funeral home to begin the arrangement process. Once you meet with the funeral home, you will need to provide them with the name and phone number of the funeral provider you would like your loved one shipped to for the final services and disposition to be arranged with. If you are not going to have a service in the city where the passing has occurred, then you can contact James H. Cole directly once directed by local authorities to do so. We will then handle the coordination with a local funeral home in the vicinity where the passing has occurred, and begin to arrange the transport of your loved one back home. Depending on the distance and logistics, this may involve air and/or ground transportation. James H. Cole will handle obtaining the necessary permits, and negotiate the many complexities that can arise during this process. Once your loved one is in our care, an arrangement time will be set for the family to meet with a director to make all selections and finalize the funeral service.

Pre-Planning

At James H. Cole Home for Funerals, we offer an extensive pre-planning program. We offer individuals the opportunity to plan, document, and pre-pay for their funeral arrangements in advance. Some of the key components and benefits of these services are:

Consultation and Guidance: A pre-planning counselor will meet with you to discuss your wishes and preferences detailing the type of Celebration of Life service desired. This includes disposition preferences of burial, entombment, or cremation, location of service, and other personalization options.

Documentation: The funeral home helps individuals document their preferences in a detailed plan. This plan can include information about the type of disposition, specific readings or music, preferred casket or urn, and other personalization options. We will also assist you in compiling all of the required information that will be needed for the death certificate.

Financial Planning: Pre-planning often involves discussing the financial aspects of the funeral. Individuals can choose to prepay for their funeral expenses in full, or establish a payment plan to break up the costs into monthly payments. By choosing to fund a pre-arranged funeral plan, you will not only provide yourself with peace of mind, but also relieve the financial burden on surviving family members who will be responsible for taking care of the funeral arrangements.

Relieving Burden: By pre-planning, individuals can relieve their loved ones of the emotional and logistical burdens of making difficult decisions during a time of grief. It ensures that their wishes are respected and carried out as intended.
